MR BING'S
THREE
GOOD LITTLE
BOYS

They always took nasty medicine like little men.

They always cut the wood
for the poor Widow Lady.

Mr. Bing's three little boys always knew
their books---

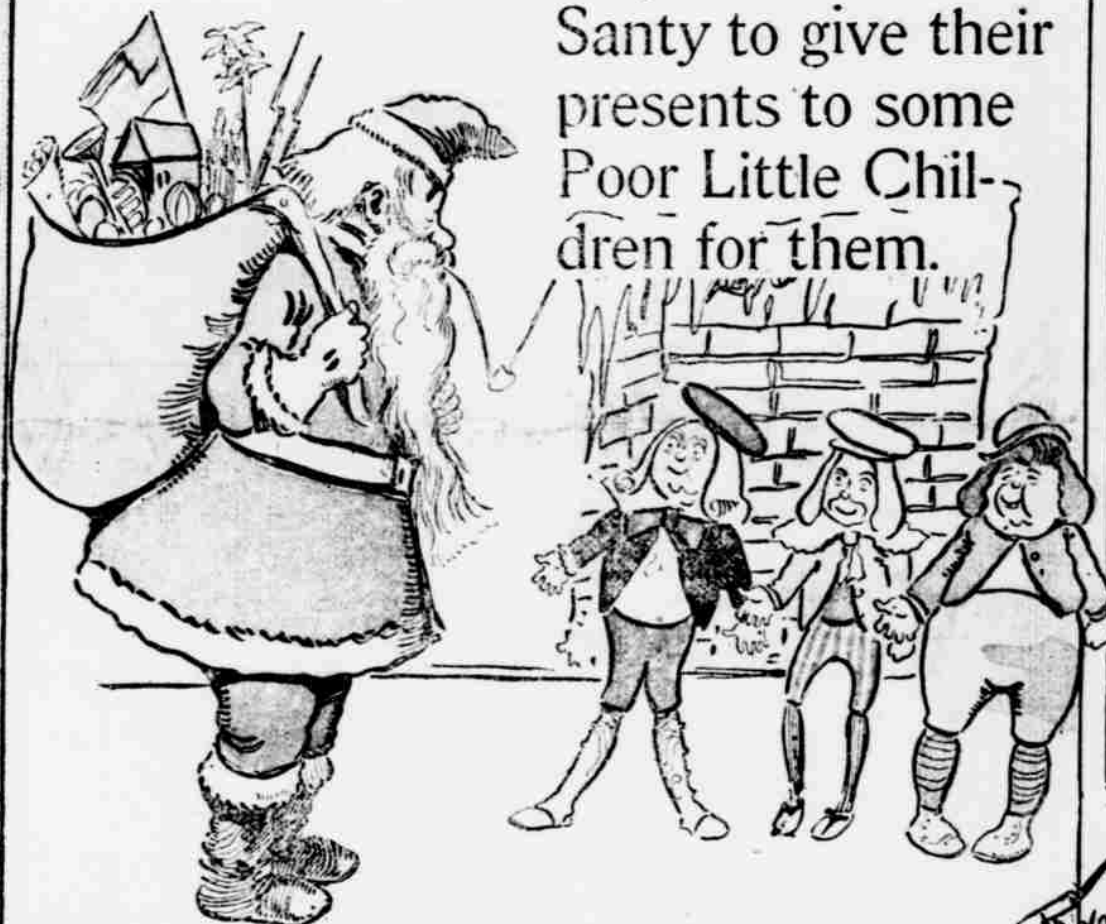

They always undressed themselves and went to bed at eight o'clock.

And they fell in a fit
if they saw the Rude Boy smoking a cigarette.

Every Christmas
they told Old Santy to give their presents to some
Poor Little Children for them.

They would never go swimming--and if accidentally they got too close to the river they would hurry away.

Mr. Bing's Three Good Little Boys were so good a big, old, hungry giant carried them off one day to eat them, because they were so Good, and he liked Good things. (To be continued.)
